

Communistology and Theologians - on the Question of Communism - 1841
By Karl Marx

- I. In fact it begins from the Paris Commune every discussion in CPCs

In fact we have to commence from the 19th century and then to the future Soviet debacles, all that tragedy of also the Chinese Communism and Cubanists and Algerians, and even Latin Americans as such.

- II. One day it Solves as the Crisis is resolved and it is just Daily Life Business as Usual

Now I imagine the contradiction arrives to resolve the crisis done by Communism, the internal contradiction in the mode of production arrives at its peculiar resolution by a synthesis of history, economics, philosophy all that.

- III. Communism is it still Alive?

The capitalist crisis continues though, from time to time, in fact there is a economic crisis, and Communism is a spectre of its resolution.
